

ENGLISH AS A MEANS OF GLOBAL COMMUNICATION

Irbutaeva Nigora Dilshodovna

Samarkand State Medical University, Samarkand, Uzbekistan

Kudratova Gulrux Izzatullaevna

Uzbek-Finnish Pedagogical Institute at Samarkand State University,
Samarkand, Uzbekistan

Sult Onmurodova Farangiz Akramovna

Uzbek-Finnish Pedagogical Institute at Samarkand State University,
Samarkand, Uzbekistan

"Knowledge of modern languages plays an important role in intellectual and human enrichment medical specialists".

S.P. Botkin

Abstract

The article discusses the important stages and the problem of the relevance of the English language in the process of globalization as the status of the language of world communication. They also talk about the need to reorganize language education in various fields.

Keywords: world English, language leader, English in education, role, video conference, requirement

Introduction

At the moment, English is the main language studied by students, and not only by them. In the 20th century, English was recognized as the language of interstate communication, as the easiest to learn among foreign languages, so England is a highly developed country technologically, scientifically and culturally. It also plays a certain political role in the world. Throughout the 19th century, the British political system promoted the spread of the English language around the globe.

And as it is already known today, English is considered the world language not only of international communication, but also the language of the information society. English is the dominant language at the present stage of society's development. The role of the English language in the formation of intercultural communication is especially important.

There is an increasing need to communicate fluently in a foreign language, and sometimes even in several. The way and volume of information perception is changing, so it is necessary to change the approaches to learning.

Also of no small importance is the global predominance of English in higher education – An important topic for conversation. Its role on the world stage is undeniable, but it is important to consider the position of the English language in higher education. All over the world, English is the key to academic cooperation through research activities, events, and connections both within and between institutions.

Language policy is becoming one of the fundamental elements of the state policy of all former republics of the near abroad.

Wondering why we study it and why we need it, what are its advantages in the modern world, we will certainly find the reasons why it is so important.

Firstly, it is considered an official language spoken in more than 50 countries around the world. And an increasing part of the world's population, where English is not the state language or a second language, is learning promising English.

His knowledge is the way to study at the best universities in the world, internships in foreign clinics, communication in the society of English speakers. A common language means unlimited opportunities and a solid career prospect in different industries. Since without an interview and a resume, it will be impossible to hire you, without knowledge of the language, you can forget to get a job abroad.

And without knowledge of English, a young scientist not only cannot get acquainted with the most significant layer of world scientific thought, but also the road to international conferences (where English is spoken) is closed to him and the possibility of publishing his works abroad is very difficult.

English means access to new information, intercultural interaction, reading books, and creative opportunities.

Since the general prospective goal of teaching a foreign language, which manifests itself in subsequent activities, is communicative competence, then the specific goal of teaching a foreign language becomes teaching communication in certain regulated and expanding situations on selected topics or areas.

Being the language of the international scientific community, English also plays an important role in medicine. Medical English is needed in order to consult with foreign doctors, conduct video conferences, conversations together, communicate with foreign patients, speak at international medical conferences, and in the end - this is the key to the world of science.

Knowledge of the language and medical terms is also required in the professional field as diagnostic, therapeutic, preventive. Knowledge of the language is also the formation of the ability in research activities. Be aware of the latest discoveries in medicine.

English in the modern world plays a huge role not only in medicine, but also in all other spheres.

Language learning is also of great benefit for the development of memory and the expansion of a person's horizons.

Of course, preference is given to languages that are in mass demand, and not salon or elite.

In the future, English will obviously remain the dominant language in the academic environment, because the influence of the United States of America or Great Britain on other states in terms of political, economic and educational spheres is still strong and significant.

It is obvious that learning English should be mandatory for young scientists. Only this foreign language can help in integration with the modern world scientific community. And of course, one cannot disagree with the statement of K. McCormick that the English language in our time is not a luxury, but a sine qua non. Indeed, given the current situation in the world, this language will lead for many years to come in the higher education environment and in the world as a whole.

But the Brazilian webmaster R. Schutz, who developed an educational website and headed a group of authors who are published on this site, believes that English can no longer be considered as a foreign language, since possession of it as a means of universal communication is an obligatory part of education. By choosing English as the world language, Schutz states, history has condemned monolingualism to illiteracy in the near future.

The globalization of the English language is also growing rapidly in the tourism industry.

World English is the past, present and future of humanity.

Literature

1. "English in the status of the language of world communication in the field of education." Bulletin of Tomsk State University
2. Valeev A.A., Kondratieva I.G. Factors of successful training in foreign language professional communication // Modern problems of science and education. – 2014. – № 6. – URL:<http://www.science-education.ru/120-16318>.
3. Skachkova I. I. THE CHOICE OF THE STATE LANGUAGE AS AN ACTUAL PROBLEM OF LANGUAGE POLICY Philological sciences. Questions of Theory and Practice, No. 2 (20) 2013.p.179-181. <http://www.gramota.net/materials/2/2013/2/47.html>

4. Kudinova E.O. The past, present and future of the English language/E.O. Kudinova.
–Text: direct// Philology and Linguistics.-2019.-№3 (12) - p.29-33
5. Irbutaeva N.D. Activation of teaching speech activity of students with a non-Russian language of instruction. INTERCULTURAL COMMUNICATION THROUGH TOURISM DEVELOPMENT IN UZBEKISTAN: EXPERIENCE, CURRENT PROBLEMS AND PROSPECTS. PP. 348-349.

