

THOSE, WHO LIVED SORROWING OVER THE MALADY OF HOMELAND REWIEV ABOUT THE NOVEL “DON’T BE AFRAID”

Gulruksor Tohirjonova

Tortkol District, 45th General Education School

11th Grade School Student

Annotation

The article describes Javlon Jovliyev's "Don't Be Afraid", its plot and characters. Reading the purpose and idea of the work today is related to the events of the 21st century. You will get acquainted with the work about 70 sought-after students who studied abroad for the nation. This work is one of the bestsellers in modern Uzbek literature.

Keywords: Javlon Jovliyev, "Don't be afraid", 70 students, education in Germany, love for the motherland, national pride, education system, modern Uzbek literature.

As soon as I heard the name of this book, I read with a great deal of enthusiasm. I realized that the novel "Don't be afraid" not only was attracting the attention of the wide mass of booklovers on social media, but it also touched hearts of them during a reading. That's why I decided to express my own opinions about the book, which deserved the recognition of numerous readers.

It will not be an exaggeration, If I point out that the novel "Don't be afraid" by Javlon Jovliyev is an amazing book, which suddenly appeared and shined brightly among other novels in Uzbek literature. It was devoted to the memory of seventy great heroes

- seventy modest students from Uzbekistan, who worried about the future of homeland, during their study in Europe. The novel is narrated by a historian boy. After being deprived of his parents, he starts to comprehend the life with a deep thought: he can't cry, feel sorrow like others and weep out. He tries to ease his pains by laughing loudly as a consequence of heartless betrayers and traits. The novel "Don't be afraid" brought literary style in a new way and it agitates the soul as sorrowful musics make us feel grief.

It is absolutely commendable that novel was written without any similarities and permanent standards. Sometimes we may witness poetry mixed with tragedy and even comedy. Even though we don't encounter books like in this genre, "Don't be afraid" was the initial one. Narrator sometimes cries, sometimes smiles. He lives his life in imagination, mostly in reality. He can easily travel around eras and unmask truths by deep thoughts and fantasy.

It is significant that dream and being awake, love and abhorrence, good deed and evil harm were correspondingly coordinated. That's why variable progress of events seems natural and conventional to readers.

The main hero of the novel compares today's people with those who lived in the past and mentally inspects the life of students at university in the beginning of the century. Stories in the novel clearly convey the great wishes of diligent students, who tried to study hard in Germany for the sake of young generations and expose the laziness of current unharried youth.

The main idea of this novel is about the future of homeland and knowledge of descendants. The writer attempted to popularize loyalty to motherland. Literary notion of the novel is on a large scale. The lifestyle before ten decades was expressed through dreams. When it comes to the real truth, it was described by means of rude remarks and irony. We can say that the novel summons the young people to wake up the whole drowsy nation.

Destiny of students, who visited the mausoleum of Amir Temur's grave and took an oath to be faithful to the motherland before going to Germany to study, is so captivating. Majority of people know that Sattor Jabbor, Maryam Sul-tonmurodova, Ahmad Shukriy, Abduvahob Murodiy and other students published the journal "Help" and organized the theatre group. We can be aware of their letters and conversations with interrogators. Olimjon Idrisiy served as a translator between governments of Bukhara, Turkistan and Germany. The extraordinary personal, whose name was Grigoriy Meyerson, went to Berlin as a representative of Soviet Union in order to make students return by force. Meyerson, who encountered the resistance of hard-working students, came across the detestation of the writer too. There aren't excessive sayings and long dialogues, which disappoint readers. Phrases are effectively intelligent and people can comprehend the meaning without difficulties. If you start reading new chapters, the continuation of events might be different than you consider. The book is full of sudden moments, but the narrator is always the main hero. "Don't be afraid" is a novel that harmonies of happiness and malady were involved together.

Readers must feel the sorrow deeply in order to understand the fundamental sense. And then the pain of nation can be significant to booklovers.

In fact, truths, which we have already known, were described in the novel. Writer doesn't hide realities by openly presenting every details to individuals as they exist. Of course, this condition attracts the attention of many people.

"Don't be afraid" is an amazing novel about suffering fates and insult, tormented history and bright future. Shame, chastity, hatred, love, betrayal and loyalty were incarnated in this book.

It is written in the novel: "Mothers of the courage are real mothers!" or we may see the complicated question as a reproof: "Mothers, whom are you giving birth?!" We have another example: "Both parents are alive, however, the child grew up like an orphan. I grew up like a day-labourer". Unanswerable questions make us think over. sometimes utilizes the opinions of students in the twenties of last century in order to convey brief contents: "We are a defeated nation, who get used to only make money after forgetting the shame!". Modern students, who were studying in Berlin, were said that it was unfair to profit through studying. The real truth is always ruthless. Anyone didn't ask the young man about the motherland, who went to Berlin in order to meet Lola. That's why it is frankly pointed out that they were the intelligent, who are virtually uneducated and the faithful, who disguised their betrayal. Classmate Ulug' is a clear example of betrayer, who hid this personality.

Why is this book called "Don't be afraid"? What is the main danger that we should be aware of? The principal reason why we must be afraid and informed is that realizing our existence, studying and working hard for the sake of our nation and society by being brave. We need honest and courageous descendants of the nation. And these important factors were exactly expressed in this novel.

References

1. Javlon Jovliyev "Don't be afraid" book
2. <https://civil.uz> site about the work "Don't be afraid".
3. Review about the novel "Don't be afraid", written by the representative of modern Uzbek literature Javlon Jovliyev.

