The establishment of the social service system is the most important trend in the country's social policy, the widespread use of modern methods and technologies that allow for effective social support of citizens in working with the population. Thanks to the establishment and development of a network of regional social services in local government - khokimiyats, the training of specialists in the field of social work, social pedagogy and applied psychology, the possibility of providing social services is becoming a reality. Providing social services to the population in modern Uzbekistan the system manifests itself as a system of specific modes of socio-human activity aimed at adapting individuals, families, or groups.

In the current socio-economic conditions of Uzbekistan, a network of new social institutions has been created. In them, needy citizens can get the necessary help and support. The Ministry of Labor and Social Protection, as well as all ministries and departments, social self-government organizations (mahallas), and the Ministry of Internal Affairs provide care for the elderly, children, and the disabled. Such institutions include social service centers for various categories of the population, centers for psychological and pedagogical assistance to the population, social rehabilitation centers for minors, regional centers for social assistance to families and children.

The country is working to improve the efficiency of the social services system, the state pays more and more attention to children and the bereaved, measures are being taken to improve the material and technical base of "Mercy", "Mercy" homes and specialized boarding schools. support is being strengthened.

citizens' self-government bodies to involve unemployed people in paid social work to provide social services to single pensioners, the elderly and the disabled. was given.

The role of the non-governmental sector in providing social services to the population and social protection of the country's citizens is growing. He is free and quick to respond to people's social needs. In recent years, the number of non-governmental organizations has been increasing.

There is no doubt about the need to formulate comprehensive programs to protect and support the population of the country. The whole of our state social policy is focused on this. Social policy and social work are inextricably linked. Social work is a specific form of social policy implementation, and social policy is the core and direction of social work. Forming a legal, civil society It is necessary to form a new type of activity for our country in a complex way and to train social workers.

"In recent years, social work in Uzbekistan has developed rapidly," said Terry Murphy, a British social scientist. Indeed, due to the reforms carried out in recent years in the field of self-interest in the country, much attention is paid to the training of social workers. The Law of the Republic of Uzbekistan "On Guarantees of the Rights of the Child" adopted in 2008 is a key document in the field of child protection. This law guarantees all the rights of the child contained in the UN Declaration of the Rights of the Child. With regard to training, Article 4 states that the training, retraining and advanced training of personnel working in the field of protection of children's rights is one of the main directions of state social policy.

At present, social protection and support activities in the country are carried out by specialists in various fields - sociologists, psychologists, educators, lawyers and others. is increased. Doubtless, different so h a specialists integration required and zurur work _ But q, h ozir country new Social Activity Institutini formed within stands. Such institutes formed reach for all principles created. These are: of the state strong social policy, ma h alliy government authorities activities, variety social organizations activity.

In conclusion, despite the diversity of the activities of the above-mentioned agencies, there is only one very important link in social work - the lack of theoretical justification for social work. It is necessary to expand the training of qualified specialists in a new direction - social workers and create a theoretical basis for social work.
