Annotation

In the development of human spirituality, various conflicts arise within the framework of the world, society, the real landscape of an individual, and their scientific, religious, dogmatic, ideological, political, artistic, and aesthetic options, which often have serious consequences. Misconceptions that confuse an individual and the highest meaning of belief are lost and replaced by distrust and fanaticism. The resulting embryo was allowed to develop in nutrients and then inserted into her womb, where it was implanted. Human thinking promotes the formation of stable information systems that develop in the educational spheres.

Keywords: information, community, spirituality, human development.

Spirituality is an example of human labor, intellect, creativity, and creativity. Art displays a person's unique talents and is also closely related to a person's skills.

At every stage of its development, development goes through the difficult path of understanding the laws of nature's development, the relationship between people, thereby depending on understanding the laws of the spiritual development of individuals. The moral landscape of both individuals and individuals in the spiritual development of spiritual development is shaped by their attitude toward the norms of their relationship with one another, as well as the norms of their relationship and worldliness. The concept of spirituality is very closely related to the development of each individual's inner world, its self-determination, or its attitude toward a certain category of spiritually developed creature. Depending on how an individual can internally answer questions about his or her existence, his relationship with other subjects, his spiritual development and attitude toward the world around him, the state of spirituality of a particular person is understood. Spirituality is a very broad concept, and spiritually developed individuals associate their actions and actions with moral standards and principles that comply not only with all individuals in a particular society, but also with spiritual principles of a general cosmic scale.

Spirituality - in the most general sense - is a collection of spirit visions in the world and in humans.

In sociology, cultural science and journalism, "spirituality" is often expressed in the form of moral values and traditions, usually called the unifying principles of society concentrated in religious teachings and practices, as well as in artistic imagery. Art. Within this approach, the projection of spirituality in the individual's mind is called conscience, and it is also emphasized that strengthening spirituality is carried out in the process of promoting (exhortation), education, superstition, or patriotism.

Spirituality is a prerequisite, factor and delicate weapon for solving the problem of human survival today, its reliable life-sustaining, sustainable development of society and individuals. How a person uses his spirituality determines his or her future and today.

Human spirituality is the wealth of thought, the power of feelings and beliefs. It becomes the property of an increasingly developed individual. It has a broad worldview, a culture of high emotions that encompasses the horizons of science and technology. Passionate hypocrites have painted the ideal of an educated and spiritually developed person.

I think a person's spirituality is also a criterion for his religion and upbringing and adherence to moral standards at the same time. The first thing that attracts attention as the hallmark of a spiritual person is his reputation and unusual inaction, sincerity and unchanging determination, his full alignment with himself and the world of truth in which such a person lives. The ability of certain experiments shows the level of spiritual development of an individual. Empathy, compassion, love, careless care, admiration, respectful abilities constitute an ideal of spirituality that is not defined by religious or social norms but is understandable to any era and culture.

The conclusion is that spirituality conveys such high moral qualities that all people, regardless of their individual characteristics, are pleased, these are the relationships between people who are valued in any society and have long been manifested in such qualities as compassion, compassion, mutual assistance, mutual assistance. Spirituality provides such a state that it is manifested in the harmony of individuals and ethnic groups, individuals and space, individuals and society, as well as a sense of stability and unity with the surrounding world, nature, people. An individual's spirituality is his strong internal position, internal morality norms that can be much higher than generally accepted in a particular society. The more spiritually developed a person is, the more he cannot independently define this boundary of his spirituality, and he seeks to constantly improve the implementation and implementation of spiritual behavioral norms that are consistent with his spiritual development, actions, and actions. The man of a democratic society is forming today. In front of him open the great horizons of science and technique.
