

EXAMPLES OF FOREIGN LITERATURE FOR ELEMENTARY SCHOOL STUDENTS

Tolipova Marjona Muxtorjon qizi
Asia International Universtitet 1st Year Master Student

Abstract:

In elementary schools, it is crucial to expose students to different cultures and languages through literature. Foreign literature can provide a window into diverse perspectives, foster empathy, and encourage a love for reading. This article aims to highlight a collection of excellent examples of foreign literature that are suitable for elementary school students.

Keywords: Imagination, books chosen, well-qualified teachers, myths, fairytales, developing mind, schoolchildrens

Introduction:

Components of life found in writing make each abstract work contain helpful virtues in the instructive world. In this manner, writing turns into a piece of the illustration materials learned in different schools on the planet.

A few nations involving writing in their school educational plans are Gree, US, German and Indonesia. In Indonesia, writing turns into a piece of gaining educational program from primary school. Writing is remembered for Indonesian language learning material for grade school. It is remembered for the assessment classification of Progress in Global Perusing Education Review 2011 as an overview directed for IV grade understudies in primary schools.

Indonesia has the 42nd position of 60 taking part states. Different examinations have been led to amplify artistic figuring out how to build the abstract capability of understudies, utilization of writing to foster other example materials, and virtues of scholarly learning in primary schools. In the meantime, examination of artistic materials in primary textbooks for understudies in Indonesia is less specific to stand out enough to be noticed. As one method for addressing the need, this exploration examines scholarly materials in grade textbooks for understudies.

The writing contains components of feeling, magnificence, language play, and significance. Artistic work is not the same as non-abstract work on the grounds that the previous contains excellence when its items are delighted in. Writing learned in grade schools is remembered for youngsters writing. Kids writing is a youngster scholarly where its items and language are predictable with scholarly and close to home advancement level of youngsters.

The advantage of youngsters writing is to increment kids love to peruse, being a key to science. It is likewise ready to foster parts of mental, emotional, and psychomotor knowledge of the kids since it needs consideration, thought precipitation, development, explicit advances which will be different between one writer and others. Structure, style, and language are utilized in a normal scholarly work.

Scholarly work has explicit rationale and beauty. Literary learning will be realizing, which attempts to foster a scholarly appreciation capability, artistic investigate, and artistic inventive flow. Learned appreciation capability is the skill to appreciate and value artistic work. Understudies are straightforwardly approached to peruse, examine, and appreciate artistic work.

This rundown of suggested perusing books for grade 2 or 3 has been assembled by teachers and bookkeepers for primary younger students matured 7-8. There is a scope of invigorating and interesting books to suit all capacities, including simple perusers and more troublesome section books.

Throughout the span of a year, these accounts ought to rouse both the people who track down perusing a battle and furthermore challenge more capable understudies. This rundown of second grade perusing proposals incorporates titles by Andrea Beaty, Jill Murphy, Jeff Brown, Katherine Applegate, Jon Scieszka.

You Are Home by Evan Turk: Praise the magnificent sights of America's public parks by perusing this rousing picture book. Through lavish, definite delineations and melodious composition, You Are Home takes perusers on an entrancing excursion, showing youthful perusers the magnificence and significance of these normal fortunes and motivating an affection for the climate.

Wishtree by Katherine Applegate: An old oak named Red portrays a contacting story of compassion what's more, harmony. At the point when a little kid's family faces segregation, the tree turns into an image of trust, as wishes are attached to its branches. This inspiring story exhibits the force of graciousness, acknowledgment, lowliness, and kinship. An optimal class peruser.

Ocean meet Sky by the Fan Brothers: Finn constructs a boat to respect his late granddad's memory and heads out to a legendary world that his late granddad told him about - a peculiar spot where the sea meets the sky. Along the way, he experiences charming marvels and animals. This wonderfully outlined picture book with not many words investigates the force of creative mind and the association between ages.

Double Bass Blues by Andrea J. Loney

Painstakingly created text and beautiful outlines recount the account of Nic, a youthful twofold bass player. Capable and lauded at school, he generally encounters issues on his process back home - when his large instrument is viewed as a disturbance by others. When home, he is welcome to play at a jazz club – making every one of his difficulties advantageous. An extraordinary story to peruse to second graders to show how constancy pays off.

Fantasies, tales and fantasies - initially established on oral practice - permitted grown-ups to speak with youngsters in a continuous cycle until nowadays. Tales have been told all over the place and in each opportunity to teach, engage and build people's mindfulness about moral standards and customs, consequently addressing a significant piece of customary legacy as well as a method for supporting resistance and common information among various populaces.

Perusing or standing by listening to stories can be viewed as huge local area rehearses, proficient to affect on youthful ages, enabling and setting them up for what's to come. Since culture is vital for learning, stories have a crucial part in molding person's job in the general public, turning into a supportive asset from pedantic, mental/restorative and educational points of view.

According to an educational perspective, storybooks can furnish kids with new data about the world, improve jargon and upgrade explicit language abilities (in the study hall or at home), supporting correspondence between the narrator (educator, parent or other expert staff) and the audience members.

It is known that accounts - by replicating fictitious circumstances that coordinate with kids' genuine issues - permit them to feel good and protected in troublesome conditions, guaranteeing profound security and furnishing better ways of managing subtle conflicts, life afflictions and stressors. Story-stories remunerate what youngsters might need, by introducing them sure examples of ways of behaving and useful models through the characters they could relate to.

Storybooks (or computerized stories) are more clear for all kids contrasted with conceptual ideas or hypotheses, and could become exceptional instruments for planning the truth and conveying wellbeing contents, particularly to the most weak gatherings.

Conclusion

By integrating foreign literature into elementary school curricula, educators can introduce young minds to different cultures, foster a sense of global citizenship, and enhance creativity. The examples mentioned above represent only a fraction of the diverse range of foreign literature available to engage and inspire elementary school students.

References

1. Kuciapiński MJ. The therapeutic and educational properties of fairytale therapy in the early stages of children's development. Pedagog Rodz. 2014;4(2):77–93. doi: 10.2478/fampe-2014-0019.
2. Johnson TD, Louis DR. Literacy Through Literature. Court St, Portsmouth: Heinemann Educational Books, Inc; 1987.
3. Babarro Vélez I, Lacalle Prieto J. Literature as a therapeutic instrument in the health-disease process in childhood. Enferm Glob. 2018;17(50):585–616.
4. Rozalski M, Stewart A, Miller J. Bibliotherapy: helping children cope with life's challenges. Kappa Delta Pi Record. 2010;47(1):33–7. doi: 10.1080/00228958.2010.10516558.
5. Gibbs LJ, Earley EJ. Using Children's Literature To Develop Core Values. Bloomington, IN: Phi Delta Kappa; 1994.

